ORGANISATION

RETE MONTAGNA

EURAC research

How do the Alps change?

In which direction do they move? And under which circumstances?

Do Alpine territories anticipate developments in other regions or are they "innovation followers"?

The 2014 Alpine Network Conference “The Alps in movement” aims to be both a platform for the exchange of research results and experiences and an opportunity to discuss the prospects of future development in the Alpine region. As such, we want to focus on and re-evaluate the position and strategic role of the Alps as a field for research and experimentation, which allow to test practices, patterns and sustainable lifestyles. The key issue will be movement as change over time, for instance the movement of people, natural features, resources, ideas and movement as direction in which to proceed. The participants will discuss three main themes, “Alpine Economies and Spatial Changes”, “Ecosystem Services Adaptation and Landscape Changes” and “Cultural Resources and Lifestyle Changes”. Additionally, intersecting themes to be examined are the relationships between the Alps and their neighbours and the current urban-rural dynamics affecting the Alps.
